Recorded on April 9th, 2021

The Trio Sora offers at the Paris Museum of Modern Art a program exploring the music of the 20th and 21st centuries through works by Astor Piazzolla, Maurice Kagel, Camille Pépin and Eric Tanguy.

Echoing the music of the Sora Trio, the dancer and choreographer Yaman Okur invests various emblematic spaces of the MAM Paris to give birth to a total encounter between architecture and music, images and sounds, performing arts and visual arts.

Music is everywhere: in bars, churches, shops, ritual ceremonies, in the headphones of our smartphones, in both public places and private places ...

It adopts an infinite number of different forms, as varied as the forms of the living world. Everything around us happens as if music had proliferated over time, transforming itself through a series of mutations.

How to explain this universality and diversity? Would it be possible to go back to a source? To an origin? Let's try to jump back in time, to the sources of music.

American, William Christie is one of the great ambassadors of French culture and the French way of "feeling art", as he likes to say. His career as a harpsichordist, conductor, musicologist and teacher remains closely linked to France. It is at the origin of a remarkable musical adventure: his rediscovery of baroque music. This film seeks to give voice to one man's unique point of view and to lift the veil on the path of this enormous talent, who is as lucid and charming as he is inaccessible.

They are singers, musicians and directors. They are between twenty and thirty years old. They have been chosen for their excellence and start their residency at the Academy of the Paris Opera. Culture and music are their trump cards and their strength. They embody both diversity and living together, but also a new generation of committed artists. They talk Mozart, Puccini, Verdi... via Skype and their cell phones. They are the world and the talents of tomorrow.

This film is their story.
